

National Concert Band Festival (NCBF) aims to provide the opportunity to experience ensemble music of the highest quality to all people who wish to participate.

NCBF is committed to ensuring that in all aspects of its activities, people of all ages have equality of opportunity and receive equal treatment regardless of disability, gender, colour, race, nationality, union membership, political beliefs, ethnic or national origin, religion, sexual orientation, marital status or responsibility of dependants.

NCBF aims to reflect the cultural diversity of the UK in all aspects of its work through its UK Regional Festivals and is able to deliver a programme which is sensitive to the different ethnic groups making up the communities in different regions.

This same policy underlines the NCBF National Festival in all aspects of its work.

NCBF aims to ensure that all decisions relating to staff recruitment and appointments, volunteer recruitment, election of Trustees and Associates, training of adjudicators and development of ensembles are addressed with cultural diversity in mind.
